Main Topic : “Character Determines Business Success”

Speaker : Sreedhar Subramaniam

Synopsis of the Talk:

Many businesses pay special attention to performance targets and balanced scorecards. Others focus on quality and service oriented processes. The pillars of a successful business hang on good process, best technology and right people. But still businesses fail. Why? The answer is Character. This talk will introduce the attendees to key steps to building a culture of character in their business

About the Speaker

Sreedhar Subramaniam has over 22 years of experience in consulting and senior management, about half of which was with a major international management consulting group. His experience encompassed corporate strategy, change management, financial and privatization consulting services for Governments and companies operating in a wide spectrum of industries. The remaining half has been with senior management positions within the media, business process outsourcing and information services industries. He is currently the CEO of an Internet Newspaper. Through his many years in the consulting and corporate world he sensed a need for character building and 3 years ago became a Consultant with the Character Training Institute, a non-profit organization based in Oklahoma involved in implementing character development programmes for businesses, Governments, schools and communities. Mr Subramaniam has a Master of Business Administration from York University, Canada, concentrating in corporate finance and cost control systems. He also holds a science degree, from the University of Toronto, specializing in Computer Science, a major in Commerce and a minor in Mathematics.
